Royal Air Force AIR DEFENCE RADAR MUSEUM

Registered Charity 1058887

WE WATCH OVER THE SKY

RAF Neatishead Station Motto and Badge.

Discover the TOP SECRET world of radar!

In the Summer of 1940, unknown to everyone, radar was playing a vital role in the success of the RAF's "Battle of Britain" pilots against the Luftwaffe.

Established in 1941, the once TOP SECRET base at Neatishead has remained pivotal in Air Defence from WWII, right through the Cold War and it still remains an operational RAF station even today.

Enter the once TOP SECRET Ops Room!

You now have our permission to visit the "Cold War" operations room, in use in the 1970's and 1980's. This is now part of the museum. Hear how Russian nuclear bombers such as the "Bear" and "Bison" were intercepted and then shadowed by RAF jet fighters.

Join up for an evocative FREE Guided Tour of this once buzzing Operations Centre in Britain's TOP SECRET radar war or feel free to wander and enjoy the amazing exhibits.

Plot incoming raids like the Plotters did in the "Battle of Britain" using information from the "Chain Home" radar system located around the coast!

See how RAF Air Defence has changed!

Through displays and films, learn how the RAF's Air Defence operations developed from early trials with huge "sound mirrors" through the first of the WWII "Chain Home" radars, the "Cold War" long range radars right up to the latest 3D radars in use with the RAF here in the UK and overseas.

Other displays show you what it was like to be a civilian at war in the 40's or take you to the fighter station at RAF Coltishall or to the TOP SECRET radar station at RAF Fylingdales, still looking, day and night, for any incoming nuclear intercontinental ballistic missiles.

There's so much to see and do while exploring the Radar Museum you should allow plenty of time for your visit!
